Photo, above: Rear View

The rear view at twilight shows the home illuminated from the interior lighting and setting itself apart from its surroundings. The proper use of interior lighting helps display the great architecture both inside and out. Plus, it accentuates the spaciousness of the vaulted ceilings and open floor plan.

The stunning rustic staircase alternates the run of the stairs, providing multiple views of the beautiful craftsmanship from many different angles. Using actual tree logs for the railings and spindles gives this staircase a custom and undeniably rugged appearance.

From the kitchen's cooktop, the view into the dining room and beyond can make any kitchen chore an absolute treat. An entire wall of windows permits amazing views of the natural and scenic terrain.

The great room's open floor plan and expansive two-story ceiling are further accented by numerous windows and rustic beams. The honey-colored wood trim on the windows mimics the decorative beams of the vaulted ceiling for a dramatic style elevated to new heights.
